A WOMAN DIGS GOLD

GERMAN BARONESS ONE OF THE KLONDIKE PIONEERS.

woman of noble birth, who is known as the only practical woman miner in all of Alaska, is in Chicago after an absence of four years at Cape Nome, Dawson City and other points of the great Eldorado within the arctic circle. She came here to buy machinery for hydraulic mining and a tenroom portable house, which she will have shipped in sections to Cape Nome. When she has completed her purchases she will visit with her friends here and at St. Louis until the fee breaks up in the spring, when she will return to the Klondike. The baroness is only thirty years old and is unmarried, having taken her title from her father, Baron Karl von Tilse of Leipsig, Germany, who came to the United States about twenty-eight years ago and resided both in Cincinnati and St.

Is Fond of Adventure. She went to the Klondike not because it was necessary for her to make her own living, but because a love for adventure led her to seek the gold fields. A fortune was left her by her father, and the first business in which she engaged was wheat speculation in Los Angeles. She made money for a time, but finally lost a great deal, and then it was that she determined to go to the Klondike.

She left Seattle early in the spring of 1898 alone, and she has been alone in her adventures ever since. She traveled with adventures ever since. She traveled with-out aid, did her own sledding with her own Fine Venetian Cloth Long Coats, in dark tan, Oxford gray and black. The style is decidedly English, having the empire yoke with loose back gathered to waist with belt, then falling to floor in deep, graceful folds; full sleeves, having gauntlet cuffs, velvet collar; all sizes. reindeer, shot the swiftest rapids of the Yukon and other rivers in Indian canoes, did her own prospecting, staked out her own claims and then guarded them against depredations with a rifle, which she knows how to use as well as the best marksman of the frontier.

It being necessary to do a certain amount of work on each claim in order to hold it, she called to her aid two men, one of them an Eskimo, and the three sunk shafts and prepared for placer mining. From the first her fortune has been of the best. When she began to pan and to dig she struck gold in enormous quantities, and when she left Cape Nome she brought with her nearly $200,000 in gold, which she either panned or secured from digging. She left behind her four claims, and has been offered while here $100,000 for a half interest in one of

The baroness is a charming woman, upon whom four years of life in the Klondike have had little effect. She talked in an entertaining manner of her adventures and declared that although life in a metropolis is pleasant she prefers the ruggedness of the ice-bound country of the northwest.
"I left for the Klondike only a year after the great rush started," she said. "I started from Seattle and went to Skagway by boat. I walked half way through the Chilcoot pass, and after two days of awful trudging I reached the Summit Hotel, which is nothing more than a tent which keeps out little more than the wind. This point marks the dividing line between the United States and British Columbia. I left the Summit Hotel on June 6 and went from there to Log Cabin, a distance of eight miles, in a driving snow storm. We started at 3 o'clock in the morning, but we did not reach Log Cabin until 7 o'clock in the evening.

"Everybody in the party was tied to a long rope, so that none would be lost. The ice gave way on the small lakes and several broke through. It was necessary after that to sit down, pull off the rubber boots and change stockings. Log Cabin is where the British custom house is situated. From there the party went to Bennett, and then I crossed Lake Bennett in a sixteenfoot boot. My companions were three men My companions were three men who were as eager as I to make rapid progress. The wind began to blow fully thirty knots an hour shortly after we started and it suddenly became extremely compelled to steer with an oar.

How She Shot the Rapids.

"We finally reached the Yukon and drifted until we came to the White Horse rapthe boat, though, and shot the rapids, a We are now showing our new line the rapids before me, and none have done it since. I went through hidden under a tarof Go-Carts, which is the largest and mounted police saw me and I was arrested after we got through.

"I would not shoot the rapids again, though, for all the money in Klondike. I walked around Five Fingers, another rapids, because of lack of courage. After tire wheels, green enameled running reaching Dawson I remained two months and then when the stampede for Nome be gan I joined in. There I staked out eight claims, all placer mines. Two of them are in the Nome mining district, four in the Blue Stone district, one on Volcano creek, bodies of the Carts are of selected one on Baroness creek, one on Bench No. 9 just off Gold run, which is the wealthiest location in that part of the country, and one on the Chijikuk in the Northern bay district. The Chijikuk and Gold run claims are the best, and I have had many

Commissioners to Inspect Models an Plans of Park Commission.

The Commissioners of the District of Co umbia have received an invitation from the Senate park commission to attend the private view of the models, plans and illusthe development of the District of Columbia at the Corcoran Gallery of Art from 4 to 9 o'clock this evening.

The Commissioners have accepted. They have taken a deep personal interest in addition to that which they would naturally have taken officially as the representatives of the District, in the work of the Senate park commission. When they were con-sulted by the commission at different stages in the preparation of its plans they co-op-erated most heartily, contributing the ad-vice and information requested of them as to the different phases of the subject. They state they will continue to do everything in their power to promote the success of the park commission plan, which embodies, they believe, all the best ideas that have been presented for the beautification of the District of Columbia.

Woman Charged Serious Offenses—Her Sister Accused of Blackmail. Ada Washington, a colored woman thirty-one years of age, residing at 11 Fenton street northwest, has been held in $1,000 bail to answer in the Police Court a charge of assault with intent to kill. It is alleged that Monday evening last the woman shot and serious injured Noah W. Tryon, a clerk in the Treasury Department, sixty years of age, at her home. She claims that Tryon had made improper proposals to her sister, Lizzie Waller, seventeen years of age, who was for some time in Mr. Tryon's employ at his home, 906 12th street northwest, Mr. Tryon denies the accusation and the authorities have placed an additional charge, that of blackmail, against Ada been fixed at $1,000. The charge of black-mail has also been placed against the girl Lizzie Waller, and she too has been held

The circumstances surrounding the shooting, as related by Mr. Tryon, are that he was called upon at the Treasury Depart-ment by Ada Washington several days ago. She raised quite a disturbance at the time by accusing him of improper conduct with her sister. The woman went away, it is alleged, upon being given $5. Last Thursday Tryon is said to have gone to the Washington woman's home to see the girl and have her bring any charges she might and have her bring any charges she might have against him in the presence of his family. The girl was not there, but it was stated she would be at home Monday evening. That evening Mr. Tryon went again to the house at 11 Fenton street. He was met by Ada Washington, who had a pistol in her hand. He says the woman placed the weapon at her sister's head and threat-ened to blow out the latter's brains it she denied having brought the charge.

The woman then turned on Tryon, he states, and told him he must sign an agreement to pay her sister a stated amount monthly or leave the room a dead man. He erence to signing the agreement. As he said this he attempted to pass the woman and succeeded. He reached the street and was proceeding on his way when he was shot in the hip. He went to his home and yesterday reported the matter to the po-

Detective Evans was put on the case and arrested the women. Ada Washington said she was "protecting her home."
